War and Rumors of War.

The following is the article referred to in the foregoing interview, which appears in the Saskatchewan Herald of March 3.

It is an exciting thing for rumors of Indian wars and rumors to become the subject of discussion during the early spring months, and it is therefore not surprising that the air should be full of them. For some time past there have been vague reports of possible trouble amongst our Indians, but it is only recently that they have assumed such definite shape as to command attention. It will be remembered by those who have had to do with the Indian matter after the late rebellion that the Indians submitted their failure to the fact that they believed some kind of action was in the air. They had seen the power of the Government to move troops at that time of the year, but had not yet seen the full force of the Government's power. They would not resist, but in all the time before it would be possible to bring any force to oppose them. From the reports of those who have been in contact with the Indians, it is clear that the Indians are not only in a state of unrest, but are also in a state of preparation for action. The danger of trouble in the near future is therefore in many ways, and it would be criminal to neglect taking proper precautions to avert the trouble, if possible, or, if it does come, to stamp it out with a promptitude and thoroughness that will actually prevent a repetition of the trouble.
